The Office of the Deputy Mayor for Education (DME) recently released Part Two in a series of Edsights looking at annual births in Washington, DC. In the latest, a birth to kindergarten ratio is applied to forecast future Kindergarten enrollment. Read the recently released Edsight, Annual Births in DC, Part 2.

About EdScape: it is DME's planning tool that provides information about the landscape of Washington, DC's public schools and students. EdScape is used to support policymakers, agencies, and schools in making data-driven decisions about programs and school planning. The interactive website is organized into five chapters covering the following topic areas: population and students, public schools and programs, public school facilities, enrollment patterns, and neighborhood factors. Users of EdScape Beta can manipulate data dashboards to focus on the 2022 and 2012 wards, as well as Comprehensive Plan planning areas and neighborhoods of the city, grade levels (elementary, middle, and high), and sector (DCPS or public charter). And users can view and filter by DC's school accountability system, the STAR Framework.
